Conference “Science and Spiritualism, 1750-1930” at the Leeds Centre for Victorian Studies, Leeds Trinity University, 30- 31 May 2019. Convenor: Efram Sera-Shriar.

Call for Papers for the 7th APA Conference, Lisbon, June 2019. The 7th Conference of the Portuguese Anthropology Association (APA) takes place from 4 to 7 June 2019 in Lisbon, at NOVA University, Faculty of Social and Human Sciences. The call for papers is now open (and until the 7th January 2019). The conference includes the following two panels dedicated or related to the history of anthropology. (1) Rescued genealogies: pathways for a historiography of World Anthropologies (convenors: Patrícia Ferraz de Matos, Institute of Social Sciences, Lisbon University, and Frederico Delgado Rosa, NOVA University, Lisbon). Abstract: The panel seeks to contribute to a re-examination of anthropology's past in a broad sense, comprising ethnographic experiences that preceded the scientific institutionalization of the discipline or remained complementary to it, sometimes through experimentalism and amateurism in various, interweaved contexts. Apart from a post-colonial critique of past attempts to survey and analyse human variability, the purpose is to understand them in their time and to reassess their place in the historical dynamics of anthropology. The panel is open to case studies focused on anthropological traditions (e.g. Lusophone and Iberian-American) that are peripheral, external or off-centre in relation to the so-called 'Major Traditions'. (2) In the trail of spurious lineages: when anthropology learns to doubt its own founders (convenors: Pâmela Marconatto Marques, Universidade Federal do Rio Grande do Sul, and Marília Floôr Kosby, Université de Liège). Abstract: It is proposed in this panel to outline an alternative composition of the anthropological-theoretical frameworks, bringing together narratives of anthropologists marked by the dissidence of hegemonic patterns of disciplinary production (non-whites, sexual dissidents, from subalternized contexts). It is, therefore, an exercise of refusing the garden of Eden with claims of purity (Haraway, 1991), based on the identification of spurious lines not recognized in the history of anthropology, marking their contributions to the debates that are dear to the development of the discipline and to the definition of its course. #### 4. Recent contributions to BEROSE International Encyclopaedia of the Histories of Anthropology (September-December 2018):

As of 7 Nov. 2018 the BEROSE encyclopaedia has changed its name to BEROSE International Encyclopaedia of the Histories of Anthropology – in line with the growing perception that there is not a single anthropology but a broad spectrum of anthropological and ethnological traditions – and that their histories are also plural. The interdisciplinary audience in the field of the history of anthropology is engaged by the pluralizing of histories, whether by historians of science, social and cultural anthropologists, folklorists, indigenous researchers, representatives of World Anthropologies, etc., whose approaches are varied.

5. Varia

International Encyclopedia of Anthropology (IEA). In HOAN's 8th circular newsletter we listed Adam Kuper's article on "Anthropology, Scope of the Discipline" in Hilary Callan (ed.) The International Encyclopedia of Anthropology. 12 vols. Hoboken, NJ: John Wiley & Sons. Published July 2018 (partly online) www.encyclopediaofanthropology.com. Comprises under "World Anthropologies" 45 entries on national or regional traditions, and biographical entries on 94 leading anthropologists from around the world. Entries, among others by members of HOAN, include: Andrés Barrera-González on Spain, Anthropology in; Cristiana Bastos and José Manuel Sobral, Portugal; Laurent Bazin, France; Sergei Kan, Unites States; Wendy James, United Kingdom; Harvey E. Goldberg and Orit Abuhav, Israel; Thomas Hylland Eriksen, Norway; Andre Gingrich, Austria; Kirsten Hastrup, Denmark; Karl-Heinz Kohl, Germany; Ulf Hannerz, Sweden; Esteban Krotz, Mexico; Mariza Peirano, Brazil; Rosana Guber, Argentina; Eduardo Restrepo, World Anthropologies; Thomas Reuter, World Council of Anthropological Associations; David Shankland, Royal Anthropological Institute; Petr Skalník, Postsocialist Europe; Sergei Alymov, Sergei Sokolovskiy, Russia; Han Vermeulen, Netherlands; Shinji Yamashita, J.S. Eades, Akitoshi Shimizu, Japan. Entries on anthropology in Australia, Chile, Colombia, Ethiopia, India, Indonesia, Poland, Siberia, South Africa, Sudan and Turkey also exist; on anthropology in Hungary, Italy, Canada or China are lacking. This page <https://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/doi/book/10.1002/9781118924396> has a "List of Entries" (excel) and under World Anthropologies lists 45 national and regional traditions.

Call for Subscribers to HAN

Previously, we notified our members that the History of Anthropology Newsletter, founded in 1973 by George W. Stocking, Jr. et al., has been relaunched as an online journal in 2016 and is publishing HoA events and publications: <http://histanthro.org>. Editor-in-chief is John Tresch, formerly at the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, now at the Warburg Institute, London. While the newsletter publishes work on anthropology in North America, the editors are open to other traditions and eager to expand its range. For example, they will soon be publishing an essay by Carlotta Santini on the dreams of the German ethnologists Ratzel and Bastian for a map of humanity, as well as a large dossier on the history of Brazilian anthropology. They invite historians of anthropology to subscribe to HAN in order to receive updates weekly (sometimes less often) on new publications and news. There's a simple box in which to put in one's e-mail address on the home page; nothing more is required. The Newsletter also invites submissions in all departments, including Reviews (with a list of new books available for review here), and other suggestions are very welcome.

Announcement: The Centre for Breton and Celtic Research (Centre de Recherche Bretonne et Celtique) has launched the digital archives of Théodore Hersart de La Villemarqué (1815-1895), who played a major role in the development of oral literature and celtic studies in France and Europe during the 19th century. Access this collection at: bibliothèque numérique. Historical presentations of this and other scholars regularly take place at the CRBC website.

Call for Articles: Stephen Reyna, Julia Eckert, and Nina Glick Schiller are interested in publishing essays on anthropology's history in Anthropological Theory: we would be pleased to review individual articles or entire issues dealing with particular themes. AT is a theory journal, so our preference is for articles that deal with theoretical or methodological matters that have been significant in the discipline's history: Stephen Reyna: reyna@eth.mpg.de.

Forthcoming: The next issue of Anuac (vol. 7, no. 2, December 2018), the journal of the Italian Society of Cultural Anthropology (SIAC), includes a Thematic Section on “The Malinowskian Legacy in Ethnography,” Guest Editors: Dorothy Zinn and Elisabeth Tauber. With contributions by Marilyn Strathern, Andre Gingrich & Eva-Maria Knoll, Chandana Mathur, Jaro Stacul, and Valeria Siniscalchi. This issue of Anuac will also feature an essay by Kate Crehan on “Antonio Gramsci: Towards an Ethnographic Marxism.”

With this, dear members, we wish you the very best for the Festive Season and the New Year
